The vote to approve was unanimous. VanderWerf said, “Congratulations to the applicant and we ask you to continue working with the neighbors going forward.”

The applicant will now submit a request for approval of a preliminary plan and final plat to subdivide the property into individual lots and rights-of-way.

tober. He described the HMO process as combining potassium permanganate or sodium permanganate with manganous sulfate in its groundwater before it is filtered and clarified. Any radium present in the water adheres, or adsorbs, to the HMO whereby it creates a suspension and can be physically removed from the water during filtration. The collected waste must then be transported to a disposal site that can accept radioactive materials. McGrady added that the district would be working with a radioactive waste management company called Rad Pros to develop a disposal plan.

The purpose of the demonstration study is to reduce radium in water to such an extremely low level that, when blended with other sources of water, there is no danger of being close to maximum contaminant level limits, continued McGrady. He described the HMO process as brilliant and relatively inexpensive since the equipment could be installed by district personnel. Anticipated as a 10-week study, district staff expects to have very successful outcomes and to continue the process until the district can draw water primarily from its renewable, or surface, water resources rather than groundwater.

In response to a director’s questions, Sexton explained that the demonstration study would reveal the amount of waste generated
